Treating Pain Is a Key Part of Cancer Treatment

Pain can happen during treatment. It can even continue after treatment is finished. Some cancer survivors have pain long after their cancer is gone. Pain is usually most common and severe when cancer is advanced. Anyone with cancer who is feeling pain should tell her or his doctors and nurses, because it is almost always possible to relieve pain.

Pain Management for Patients With Cancer

Treating Pain Is a Key Part of Cancer Treatment

Pain can happen during treatment. It can even continue after treatment is finished. Some cancer survivors have pain long after their cancer is gone. Pain is usually most common and severe when cancer is advanced. Anyone with cancer who is feeling pain should tell her or his doctors and nurses, because it is almost always possible to relieve pain.

Cancer treatment is not just about removing or shrinking tumors. Pain can make you tired, mad, on edge, lonely, stressed, worried, and depressed.

Pain can make it hard to eat, sleep, take care of yourself and others, work (at home or at your job), and enjoy the things you like to do. Pain can even make it hard to continue cancer treatments.

Your doctors and nurses should know how important it is to control your pain. Tell them about your pain so they can help. There are many causes of pain and many kinds of pain. Your doctor may suggest different treatments.

The 2 main kinds of pain meds are:

- Meds that you can get without a prescription, like acetaminophen (either generic or a brand like Tylenol) and aspirin. These can control pain that is not too severe, but also can be a useful addition to stronger meds.
- Prescription pain meds, such as opioids. These medications can be very effective at treating pain from cancer when they are prescribed and closely monitored by your doctor.

Other meds that often are used to treat other conditions (like depression or epilepsy) also can be combined with pain meds to help relieve certain kinds of pain.

Most meds for pain can be taken by mouth as pills or liquids. In a hospital, some also can be injected into a vein or under the skin. Others can be injected around the nerves that carry pain signals to your brain. In some cases, a surgeon can cut these nerves to control the pain.

Radiation and chemotherapy often are used to help patients live longer. Sometimes, this goal is no longer possible, but

Search Tips

检索技巧

You can use the Boolean operators AND (also + or &), OR and NOT (also -) within search fields. These operators must be entered in UPPERCASE to work.

If more than one term is entered, and no operators are specified, terms are searched using phrase.

Use a question mark (?) in a search term to find words with a missing character (wom?n finds women).

Use an asterisk (*) to represent zero or more characters. For example, *plant finds all words with that root (plant, plants, & planting) while *an*mia* finds variants with one or more letters (anemia & anaemia). Wildcards CANNOT be used at the start of a search term (tension*) or when searching for phrases in quotes ("tobacco smok"*).

Author Search

Author names may appear with full first names or just initials. Place author names in quotes to find a specific name and its variants. For example, "John Smith" finds articles by John Smith. John K quotes. For example, spinal cord searches spinal AND cord while “spinal cord” finds this exact phrase.

Wildcards

Use a question mark (?) in a search term to represent a single character (wom?n finds women or woman). Use an asterisk (*) to represent zero or more characters. For example, *plant finds all words with that root (plant, plants, & planting) while *an*mia* finds variants with one or more letters (anemia & anaemia). Wildcards CANNOT be used at the start of a search term (tension) or when searching for phrases in quotes (“tobacco smok”).

Author Search

Author names may appear with full first names or just initials. Place author names in quotes to find a specific name and its variants. For example, “John Smith” finds articles by John Smith, John K Smith and John Colby-Smith while “J Smith” finds
